Performance Commentary

Global markets experienced elevated volatility in Q4 2025, driven by geopolitical tensions and the lingering impact of US tariff announcements earlier in the year. Despite this backdrop, global equities remained resilient, supported by steady economic conditions and solid performance outside the US. In Australia, small caps and the resources sector outperformed, even as the broader market dipped slightly in Q4. Fixed-income markets saw sharp movements as investors de-risked, resulting in wider credit spreads and creating opportunities for disciplined managers to capture improved yields. Interest-rate expectations shifted across regions: Australia's firm labour market and persistent inflation pushed yields higher, while Europe, the UK and Japan were influenced by their own domestic dynamics. Duration was rewarded in many markets as longer-dated yields eased, though the UK continued to face upward pressure from stubborn inflation.

Commodities delivered mixed results for the quarter, although precious metals again stood out. Overall, Q4 underscored the importance of maintaining a globally diversified portfolio and a patient, long-term approach through varying market conditions. Against this environment, the ACI Balanced Strategy returned 1.90% for the quarter (net of fees, before tax).
